

Instructions:

- Add up your scores for Statements: 6,9,11 and multiply by 1.5 for Category A Learner
- Add up your scores for Statements: 1,7,8,13,15,16 for Category B Learner
- Add up your scores for Statements: 3,5,12 and multiply by 1.5 for Category C Learner
- Add up your scores for Statements: 2,4,10,14 and multiply by 1.25 for Category D Learner

You should have four totals now for Categories A,B,C and D.

It is quite normal to have a large variety of category scores across a group of learners.

If your Category A score is higher than all the others, then you seem well prepared and motivated to engage in your studies and work with your classmates from different countries and cultures now and after the self isolation period. Your ways of learning would seem to be open to change and newness.

If your Category C or Category D score is higher than all the others, then you are prepared and want to work hard in your studies but are worried about how that might develop. This could be because of concerns with your language or how others might see you or that you might be uncomfortable initially working with a diverse group of people. By using the support and help available to you as you move into your studies from your College and the University, you will build your confidence and your network of friends. This will help you find your voice to speak.

If your Category B score is higher than all the others, then you may find your initial engagement and study difficult. Your approach to learning so far will not be as open as it may need to be and dealing with 'newness' will be a challenge. You may have a strong reliance upon home friends and family but you also need to try to build friendships as you move into your studies and with those in your class and on your degree. You will often find they are nervous and worried too and would welcome speaking with someone in a similar situation. Remember your College and the University also has a range of support services available to help you.

If your scores across the categories are more or less similar, then you are prepared for your studies but naturally have some worries and concerns. This is normal and as with the above discussions, nothing to worry about. You may find the following tips helpful in supporting your preparation to join your studies