Introduction

There are many different referencing systems, but one of the best-known and most popular systems is the Harvard system. However, you will find that there are slightly different versions of the Harvard system in use across universities worldwide. Don't panic! This document has been designed to provide you with examples and guidance on how to use Harvard referencing in a consistent and accurate manner to refer to information sources used in your work, such as books, journal articles, websites etc. It is a comprehensive guide, which aims to answer most of your Harvard referencing questions. Library and Learning Services have also produced a two page quick start to referencing, 'The Harvard Referencing – Quick Guide'.

In addition, it is often worth checking with your tutor to see if they have any specific referencing requirements.

What is referencing?

Referencing is a way of acknowledging other peoples' ideas and work. You do this through a citation (in the text of your work) and a reference at the end of your work.

The purpose of referencing is so that anyone reading your work can refer to the original source to check and verify the ideas presented. You must reference any source that you use:

- To support an argument, to make a claim or to provide evidence
- To acknowledge other peoples' ideas or work correctly
- To show evidence of the breadth and depth of your reading
- To avoid plagiarism (i.e. to take other peoples' thoughts, ideas or writings and use them as your own)
- To allow the reader of your work to locate the cited references easily, and so evaluate your interpretation of those ideas
- To avoid losing marks!

Citing within your work

The citation within the text of your work is a brief acknowledgement to a source you have used for any of the reasons listed above.

If you are using a direct quotation or are referring to a specific idea or assertion by an author, you need to let your reader know where you found the information by giving the author/creator's surname, the year and the page number, e.g. (Surname, Year, Page). The page number is important, as one of the prime functions of referencing is to enable your reader to quickly locate the information you have used and to verify the conclusions you have drawn. By using the page number, your reader can do this without having to read the entire work (book, journal article etc.,) to which you are referring, which could be hundreds of pages long!

If you are not referring to a specific idea or assertion, but are referring to a work by an author in its entirety or to a more general argument you only need to include the author/creator's surname and the year, e.g. (Surname, Year).

If you have named the author in the flow of your text, you only need to provide the year and page number (if applicable), e.g. (Year, Page).

Paraphrasing or citing a specific idea

e.g.1

...Research has shown a direct link between body image and self-esteem (Jones, 2010, p.4)...

e.g.2

...Jones' research has shown a direct link between body image and self-esteem (2010, p.4)...

Citing an author you have mentioned in your text

e.g.1

Terry Eagleton (1983) created an essential guide to literary theory that still resonates into the twenty first century...

e.g.2

Nikki Gamble has created a set of activities to aid narrative thinking and investigation (2013, p.70)...

Citing a short quotation

... whilst it is possible that “poor parenting has little effect on primary educational development it more profoundly affects secondary or higher educational achievement” (Healey, 2003, p.22).

Citing a long quotation

N.B. There is no need to use quotation marks. Instead start a new line and indent the quotation.

The methodology required for a thorough literature search requires an understanding of a number of different sources:

... it is important to be familiar with the tertiary sources (bibliographies of bibliographies), which will help you to identify the secondary sources (such as bibliographies, indexes and abstracts), which will then lead you to primary sources for your review (Pickard, 2013, p.27).

 Remember: it is best to paraphrase the sources you have used in your work, putting the author’s words into your own and crediting them with the idea through the citation. Try and keep quotations to a minimum. You do not need to include the page number from the quotation in your reference list.

If you are taking a quotation from a website you may not be able to find a page number, so you will need to include an indication of where the quote can be found. Give a line or screen number instead e.g. use [45 lines] or [approx. 5 screens].

Citing more than one source

If you are citing more than one source, you can separate them with a semi colon.

...There are many factors relating to individuals perceived body image. Jones (2010, p.4) has suggested that body image is related to self-esteem, others believe a more complex relationship exists (Philips, 1995; Norton, 2005).

Citing a source with more than one author

Some sources will have a number of authors. If there are two authors, you write (Surname A and Surname B, Year). If there are more than two authors, you can use et al. This means 'and others', e.g. (Surname et al., Year).

e.g.1 with two authors:

A number of practitioners have tackled the issue teaching information skills in the university setting (Webb and Powis, 2004)...

e.g. 2 with more than two authors:

...There has been some debate amongst medical practitioners on the issue (Williamson et al., 2008)...

However, in your reference list you must make sure you give credit to all the authors (don't use et al.). Instead, write all of the authors in the order that they appear on your source as shown below:

Williamson, G. R., Jenkinson, T. and Proctor-Childs, T. (2008) Nursing in contemporary healthcare practice. Exeter: Learning Matters.

 Remember: et al. should be in italics with a full stop, as it is an abbreviation.

Editors

If you are using a book that has an editor (with no named authors for the different sections of the book) then you would cite and reference the editor as you would an author. However, if the book you are referring to has individual authors attributed to the different chapters then you have to cite and reference the author of the chapter, rather than the editor.

In the extract below, from the contents page of an edited book, you can see that each chapter has a different author. Therefore cite and reference the author of the specific chapter that you are referring to in your work. Full details on how to reference an edited book are on page 16.

Section 1: Care, Compassion and Communication	1
1 An Introduction to Communication Palo Almond and Jackie Yardley	3
2 Communicating with Children and Young People Beth Sepion	19
3 Communicating with People with Learning Disability Kevin Humphrys and Jane Smith	29
4 Communicating with People with Mental Health Issues Paula Libberton	37
5 Communication and Loss Carmel Sheppard and Pauline Turner	47

Fig. 1: example of a table of contents from an edited book (Childs et al., 2009, p.v)

Same author, same year

If you are referring to two sources by the same author, produced in the same year, you can distinguish between them by adding letters to the end of the year for both your citation and reference.

For example:

Research into the importance of chocolate on individuals' moods has highlighted a difference between the cocoa levels of chocolate (Hoskin, 2011a, p.41). This has indicated that the higher the cocoa levels, the greater impact the chocolate has on mood (Hoskin, 2011b, p.12). However, further research is investigating how much of this is related to the sugars within the chocolate (Hoskin and Siddall, 2012, p.21).

Authors with the same surname in the same year

If you are citing two authors with the same surname, who have published in the same year, you can include their initials to differentiate between them.

For example:

It is important that students develop academic skills as soon as possible during their HE course (Williams, N., 2013, p.12). Otherwise students are likely to fall behind as they progress through their course (Williams, E., 2013, p.30). Therefore academic skills should be embedded in first year courses at University.

Corporate Author

You may come across a source which has a corporate author, where an organisation, rather than an individual, is responsible for the work. For instance, a government organisation would be cited in the same way as an author, with the organisation name as the author, for example: (Department of Health, 2013).

Remember:

Some sources are the result of collaboration between a number of contributors, none of whom can claim authorship, e.g. dictionaries, encyclopaedias or films. In this case you can use the title in place of the author name, for example: Gone with the Wind.

References list and bibliography

What is the difference between a references list and a bibliography?

References list: is a list of all the sources that you have cited within your work

Bibliography: is a list of everything that you have cited and everything that you have consulted to help improve your understanding of the topic.

Sometimes people use the terms references list and bibliography interchangeably, although strictly they are not the same thing. You should check with your tutor to see if they would prefer to have a references list or a full bibliography. Make sure that if you have cited something, there is a complete reference to match at the end of your work.

References must be listed in alphabetical order by the author's surname or the name of the creator/company.

 Remember: It is good practice to record the reference information required before you start reading and making notes on your source. It means you can easily refer back to the material you need, without having to search for it again.

Elements of a reference

Below are some examples of the type of information that you will need to include in your reference.

Author	An individual or organisation responsible for creating the source.
Year of publication	The year the source was published, for example the edition year or the copyright © date on a website.
Title of article/chapter	When you are referring to a section of a bigger piece of work, you may need to give the title of the section that you're looking at, for example a book chapter.
Publication Title	The name of the source, for example book title or journal name.
Place of publication	Location listed on the source, for example the office address of the book publisher. This should be a town or city, not a country. Use the first place listed.
Publisher	Normally a company who has produced the information and made it publicly available.
Edition or volume information	This is to indicate if it is a part of a series or if a source replaces an earlier copy. A second edition of a book is an update to the first. For example, it may include more or different information to the earlier version. A journal will produce a number of issues a year, so you need to include the volume and issue number to demonstrate where in the series this source comes from.
Page span	If you are referring to something within a larger piece of work, you should include the first and last page of that section, for example of the book chapter.
URL or web address	If you have accessed something from the internet, you will need to include the full web address for that information. You can copy and paste this from your browser bar, into your reference.

 Remember: to note down the complete reference details for any source that you use, whether it is a book, journal article, website or a source that you have photocopied.

Publication information

3. Title

2. Date of publication

4. Edition

1. Author

6. Publisher

5. Place of publication

(Bolton, 2010, p.iii)

What do I do if publication details are not given?

Occasionally you will come across documents that lack basic publication details. In these cases it is necessary to indicate to your reader that these are not available. A series of abbreviations can be used and are generally accepted for this purpose:

Missing publication details	Abbreviation.
author/corporate author not given	use [Anon.]
no date	use [n.d.]
no place (sine loco)	use [s.l.]
no publisher (sine nomine)	use [s.n.]
not known	use [n.k.]

For web pages it is often necessary to look beyond the page you are referencing to the 'Home Page' for the whole site or at a link such as 'About Us' from that home page. Dates are often given at the bottom of web pages.

What are secondary references?

A secondary reference is when you refer to someone cited within another source, i.e. you have not read the original work. Ideally, you should always try and read the original source so that you can review the work first hand. If you are not able to locate the original source, it is acceptable to reference it as a secondary reference, following the format below.

In text citation example

(Bancroft and Silverman, 2002, cited in Harne and Radford, 2008, p.63)

Reference list example

Harne, L. and Radford, J. (2008) Tackling domestic violence: theories, policies and practice. Maidenhead: Open University Press.

➔ Note: in your references list, you only include details of the sources you have read and directly consulted.

Example essay extract with citations and references list

Below is an example essay, complete with citations and references. Please remember this is a fictional essay purely designed to demonstrate how and when to reference.

There has been a tendency amongst health workers to diagnose women experiencing domestic violence with a mental illness, rather than identifying the distress as a result of violence (Harne and Radford, 2008, p.44). However, progress has been made in helping the general public to recognise the signs and raise awareness of the many support networks in the UK (COAP, 2009). Some social work practitioners have used different techniques to try and change the environment where domestic violence is prevalent (Gray, 2009).

The education of health practitioners now includes ways of identifying and supporting victims of domestic violence “the NMC recognizes the importance of community nurses in supporting families to contact the support services where domestic violence occurs” (Williamson et al., 2008, p.25).

Example reference formats for different source types

➔Note: in all of the format examples that follow, for simplicity we have demonstrated each example as if citing an author's work in its entirety, rather than a specific idea. Depending on what you are citing or what you have already included within your written text you may need to also include a page number or just include the year, e.g.:

(Eagleton, 1983, p.110) or (1983, p.110) or ...Eagleton (1983) writes that...

Please refer to the section on citing for detailed guidance.

Printed sources and e-books

Books

Format: in text citation

For continuing professional development nurses must attend regular accredited training (Surname, Year, Page).

Format: Reference

Author/editor surname, initials. (Year) Title. Edition. Place of publication: Publisher.

➔Note: You do not include the edition information if it is the first edition.

Example: in text citation

For continuing professional development nurses must attend regular accredited training (Orem, 2009, p.23).

Example: Reference

Orem, D. E. (2009) Nursing: concepts of practice. 4th ed. St. Louis: Mosby-Year Book.

Chapter in an edited book

Format: in text citation

For continuing professional development nurses must attend regular accredited training (Surname, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Edited book with no names on chapters

If you are using an edited book which does not have author names linked to the chapters, then you can credit the editor of the book in your citation and reference. If you are using more than one chapter from this same text, you will need to differentiate your citations by using a and b after the year to clarify which chapters you are referring to, for example (Cox and Roper, 2005a, p.13).

Format: in text citation

When dealing with patients with respiratory difficulties it is essential that health professionals are aware of the non-verbal signals the patient is using to communicate with them (Surname, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Editor surname, initials. (ed.) (Year) Title of chapter. In: Title of book. Edition. Place of publication: Publisher, first and last page numbers.

Example: in text citation

When dealing with patients with respiratory difficulties it is essential that health professionals are aware of the non-verbal signals the patient is using to communicate with them (Cox and Roper, 2005, p.24).

Example: reference

Cox, N. and Roper, R. A. (eds.) (2005) Cardiovascular system. In: Clinical skills. Oxford: Oxford University Press, pp.21-73.

Translator details

If the book you want to use in your assignment has been translated you need to include the translator details in your final reference, however you do not need to include this in the in text citation.

Format: in text citation

Montaigne's philosophical essays have been reinterpreted by a number of different academics (Surname, Year).

Format: reference

Author/editor surname, initials. (Year) Title. Edition. Translated by Surname, initial. Place of publication: Publisher.

Example: in text citation

Montaigne's philosophical essays have been reinterpreted by a number of different academics (Starobinski, 1986).

Example: reference

Starobinski, J. (1986) Montaigne in Motion. Translated by Goldhammer, A. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

e-book

If you are looking at an e-book in PDF format, where you know there is an equivalent copy of the book in print, you can reference the book as a print version (see page 15). You may find this easier than including the full URL. However, if you can only see an electronic version of the book, reference using the example below.

Format: in text citation

Postmodernism has had an impact on the political agenda of the UK (Surname, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Author/editor surname, initials. (Year) Title [online]. Place of publication: Publisher. Available from: URL. [Accessed date].

Example: in text citation

Kindle books or books on eReaders

Books on eReaders may lack page numbers, if you are going to quote from them, you can refer to the chapter rather than the page number, if it is not available.

Format: in text citation

It is clear that there are numerous ways to eat chocolate bars (Surname, Year, Page/Chapter).

Format: reference

Author/editor surname, initials. (Year) Title [online], edition, platform. Place of publication: Publisher [if available]. Available from: website. [Accessed date].

➔Note: You do not include the edition information if it is the first edition.

Example: in text citation

It is clear that there are numerous ways to eat chocolate bars (Elphinstone, 2012).

Example: in text quotation

“Always find a space where you can sit in peace and quiet before you enjoy your chocolate bar” (Elphinstone, 2012, chapter 1).

Example: reference

Elphinstone, H. (2012) How to enjoy a chocolate bar in peace [online]. Kindle. London: Chocoholics Anonymous. Available from Amazon.co.uk [Accessed 14th May 2013].

Legislation

Legislation should be treated the same whether found in print or online.

Format: in text citation

It is illegal to breed dogs which are known as pit bull types (Title of Act, Year).

Format: reference

Title of Act Year (SI number if needed) Place of publication: Publisher

Example: in text citation

It is illegal to breed dogs which are known as pit bull types (Dangerous Dogs Act, 1991)

Example: reference

Insolvency Rules 1986 (SI 1986/925) London: HMSO.

Government publications

Available data may vary for these, but where possible include the following:

Format: in text citation

It was suggested that inequalities in infant mortality seemed to be narrowing in the late 1970s (Government Department, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Government Department/Institute. Subdivision of department/institute (if known). (Year) Title of document. (Name of chairperson if it is a committee.) Place of publication: Publisher.

Example: in text citation

It was suggested that inequalities in infant mortality seemed to be narrowing in the late 1970s (Department of Health and Social Services, 2000, p.15).

Example: reference

Department of Health and Social Services. (2000) Inequalities in health: report of a research working group. (Chairman: Sir Douglas Black.) London: DHSS.

White/Green papers

Format: in text citation

It was argued that teachers needed to have increased powers if discipline in schools was to be improved (Department name, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Department Name (Year) Title of paper. Command Paper. Number. Place: Publisher.

Example: in text citation

It was argued that teachers needed to have increased powers if discipline in schools was to be improved (Department for Education, 2010, p.2).

Example: reference

Department of Education (2010) The importance of teaching. Command Paper. 7980 London: TSO.

Journal articles

Format: in text citation

Effective patient-clinician communication has been shown to be vital for older patients and their nurse practitioners (Surname, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Author surname, initials. (Year) Title of article. Journal Title. Volume number(issue or part number), pp.first and last page numbers.

Example: in text citation

Effective patient-clinician communication has been shown to be especially vital for older patients and their nurse practitioners (Gilbert and Hayes, 2009, p.285).

Example: reference

Gilbert, D. A. and Hayes, E. (2009) Communication and outcomes of visits between older patients and nurse practitioners. Nursing Research. 58(4), pp.283-293.

Electronic journal articles

If a journal exists in both print and electronic form it is often simpler and clearer to use the print journal format for referencing the item, regardless of which item you have viewed. If you need to reference the electronic form, you can use one of the following formats.

Format: in text citation

Marketing communications can be done through a variety of mediums (Surname, Year).

Format: reference using a URL

Author surname, initials. (Year) Title of article. Journal Title [online]. Volume number(issue or part number), pp.first and last page or line numbers. Available from: URL [Accessed Date].

Format: reference using a doi (digital object identifier)

Author surname, initials. (Year) Title of article. Journal Title [online]. Volume number(issue or part number), pp.first and last page or line numbers. Available from doi: [Accessed Date].

Example: in text citation

Marketing communications can be done through a variety of mediums (McArthur and Griffin, 2006).

Example: reference using a URL

➔ Note: Some publishers provide a digital object identifier (doi) so that an article can be found online quickly and easily. If a doi is available, you will usually find it at the start of the article, in the article details section and you can use it instead of the URL.

Market reports

Format: in text citation

Marks and Spencer's retail market has grown over the past ten years (Provider, Year, Page).

Format: reference

Provider (Year) Title. Place of publication: Publisher.

Example: in text citation

Marks and Spencer's retail market has grown over the past ten years (Intel, 2009, p.21).

Example: reference

Intel (2009) Department store retailing. London: Intel International Group.

Newspapers

For most newspaper articles you can cite the author and year in the text of your work. However, if it is a news article and does not attribute an author, the newspaper name is used in the text and instead of the author in the reference list.

Format: in text citation

Newspapers have been quite negative in their coverage of Maxwell (Surname, Year).

Format: reference

Journalist surname, initials. (Year) Title of news item. Name of newspaper. Day, Month, pp.first and last page numbers.

Example: in text citation

Newspapers have been quite negative in their coverage of Maxwell (Peters, 2009).

Example: reference

Peters, R. (2009) Picking up Maxwell's bills. Independent. 4 June, p.28.

British standards

Format: in text citation

The originator's name and the year of publication of the document cited are given after each reference in the text (BS number, Year).

Format: reference

British Standards Institute (Year) Title. BS number. Place of publication: Publisher.

Points to remember

Always be consistent.

When checking your work, make sure there is a corresponding reference for each citation.

Above all - be consistent in whatever method of referencing you use.

1. The information source title should be in italics, e.g. book title, journal title, web source
2. The year is the year of publication, not printing.
3. For a book the edition is only mentioned if other than the first.
4. The place of publication is the city not the country.
5. Journal titles should be given in full.
6. Volume and part numbers should appear like this: 25(2)
7. Page numbers are written: p.4 or pp.33-39.

You should check with your tutor to see if they have a preferred style.

Glossary of terms

Accessed Date	The date on which you viewed or downloaded the document/website. It may be subject to changes or updated, so this date allows for that possibility.
Citation	A brief credit within the body of your work (Surname, Year)
Corporate author	Normally an organisation, such as a government department who is responsible for a publication e.g. Department of Health
Edition	This is to indicate if it is a part of a series or if a source replaces an earlier copy. A second edition of a book is an update to the first. For example, it may include more or different information to the earlier version. Editor An individual or group of individuals who collate work for publication
Issue	A regular series of a magazine or journal. For example, a monthly journal would have twelve issues a year, one issue per month.
Page span	The first to last page of the source/document.
Paraphrase	Where you summarise what you have read into your own words and give credit to the original source where you got that information from.
Place of publication	Location listed on the source, for example the office address of the book publisher. This should be a town or city, not a country. Use the first place listed.
Publisher	Normally a company who has produced the information and made it publicly available.
Quotation	When you copy a part of the original work, exactly as it appears and use it in your own work. This must be followed by a citation crediting the author.
Reprint	A reprint is when the publishers run out of copies of a print book and print a new number of copies – the information is exactly the same as the previous edition.
Surname	Where surname is used it refers to the family name or last name of the individual.
Volume	This is to indicate if it is a part of a series or if a source replaces an earlier copy. For example, a book may have a second edition which includes more or different information to the first edition. A journal will produce a number of issues a year, so it is important to include the volume and issue number to demonstrate where in the series this source comes from.
URL or website	If you have accessed something from the internet, you will need to include the full web address for that information. You can copy and paste this from your browser bar, into your reference.
