

This body of work began with a question — what does colour remember? In this process, dye became both material and message. It allowed me to reflect on how textiles can become archives of time and care.

